There has been a great deal of progress on Phase I of the Comprehensive PK-12 Facility Project in Moro since my last communication. As you can see from the photos, the finishing stages for the James Weir Memorial Agricultural/Career Technical Education Center and the new Kitchen are occurring. All sheet rock is installed for both additions and taping began on November 16th. We anticipate taping for the Agricultural/CTE Center will be complete and ready for paint on November 24th. Casework and interior fixtures are scheduled for install the first week in December. Coordination efforts from the School District, BBT Architects and Kirby Nagelhout Construction Company have occurred regarding color selections for these two additions. We anticipate that the Agricultural/CTE Center will be ready for move in during winter break. For the Kitchen, KNCC is continuing to work on procurement items and at this time, we anticipate it will be ready for use early in January.

Over the next few weeks you will see activity progressing on Phase II, which will include the new elementary building wing. Currently, work continues on the segmental wall and excavation for the foundation began November 16th. This week crews will begin forming the footings for Phase II and will work continuously through the winter. As Phase I winds down, Phase II will ramp up. It has been exciting to see all the daily progress of the project.

On November 5th the Board of Directors voted in a public meeting to approve the Guaranteed Maximum Price for Phase II of the Comprehensive PK-12 Facility.
